Problem

Current fraud detection is insufficient

- Current transfer fraud detection systems are built by tracking the behavioural matrix (e.g. transfer location, time, amount and history)
- ISSUE 1: These matrix are differ across platforms
 - Detection depends only on user's history with that particular apps
- ISSUE 2: How they are tracked is always private
 - A scam prevented on one platform isn't prevented on another

STAT: Only 1 in 5 financial institutions primarily rely on automated fraud detection

Competitive Analysis

Statistics

- Major banks detected and stopped only about 13% of scam payments made by their customers.
 - Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC)
- So little trust in fraud detection systems that only 13% of fraud victims actually report the crime central bodies.
 - Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC)
- Only 1 in 5 financial institutions primarily rely on automated fraud detection
 - 2025 LexisNexis

Service Overview

Main Selling Point

- Tracks user's transaction behavior across all transaction platform
- Runs with just one download set-up

Technicals

- The main orchestrator concurrently deploys 3 specialised sub-agents (Risk, Behaviour, Anomaly) and aggregates their findings into a unified verdict.
- Builds a map of all transactions stored in the database to determine possible fraud behaviour and find existing fraud bank accounts
